A group of 23 high school students and five middle school students at Black River Public School, along with teacher Peter Middleton, debuted their "Think Big" art project Tuesday at Sanctuary Woods in Laketown Township. The project aims to raise awareness of consumerism and the need for conservation. The multimedia performance installation includes foam sculptures of fast food and litter, such as hot dogs the size of sofas and french fries as big as railroad ties. It also featured 15-minute dance performances. "Everything is to scale," said Middleton. The sculptures are made out of a plastic foam substance and will be recycled.
